Dine Out for History returns for its second year; Millerton restaurants partner with North East Historical Society

MILLERTON – The North East Historical Society plans round two of its successful Dine Out for History series, in which it collaborates with Millerton area restaurants to help preserve the region's past.

On select dates from January 26 through March 26, seven Millerton restaurants will host their own Dine Out for History night, where 10 percent of the proceeds from all patrons that night will be donated to the historical society to support its research, digitize its collection and make historic content more available to the public, particularly educators.

"We had a great time doing this last year," said Edward Downey, president of the North East Historical Society. "The aim is to also benefit local restaurants in wintertime when business can be slow. Our supporters really turned out last year, and we hope to have the same support this year."

Diners can go whenever they want at dinnertime on the designated nights, but they are encouraged to make reservations where required and mention Dine Out for History.

The historical society will launch the series at The Millerton Inn, 53 Main Street, on Sunday, Jan. 26. An optional brief presentation on historic food businesses will be at 5:30 p.m. for those who want to come early. It will be offered with a glass of wine, and guests can enjoy their dinners at the inn after that. Dinner reservations are requested.

The remaining restaurant dinners run through March 26. To get a reminder, please sign up for the North East Historical Society newsletter by contacting Ed Downey at eddowney@millertonlawyer.com.
